

We split the project into two parts. One part is web programming and the other part is improving the web design. We assigned different people to each part. I am one of those responsible for improving the looking of the web page, and I am mainly focusing on improving the Home page. I'll say I am only doing 5% of the work out of the total, since improving the looking is not the hardest part. I am still testing different layouts and colors, and they are not finalized yet. It takes a lot of trying to find out the best combination of color.
